They just fucked many times now. Tom Henderson has just booted this from another source (as he often does). I am sure that Atvi internally knew that the annual release schedule has been preventing the quality of the franchise, and really the whole company for having a "all hands on the deck" to ensure that they can push a title Each year. It would be incredibly cool to get a new IP FPS from Infinity Ward. GameStop and other retailers are basically fucked after this year. This is just a good thing Treyarc is my group developer in the group, so I'm glad they have extra time. You forgot the most important: timed exclusivity. I mean, unless there are problems with the acquisition, it would probably have been the MSFT decision anyway. Edit: NVM is releasing in the next year. (I do not think they would have pushed him out, care about you - and this is not a reasonable "cause", then he would still have his golden parachute, even who had.) This would also have tanned the abk stock wildly today. So the cod is not pausing .. Bethesda business also went before that. Good MP means that everyone needs access to maps and things - and they can not make money from people who are not playing! I have to sell these skins and cod points! If you are crossplay with your friends, it is not fun when some people do not have the new map. OK, but if I pay 24k / year for the Bloomberg terminal, do I get a lil CRT screen box that rolls my premium news or I read on my cell phone as a normie? They said their most popular games will still be released on PS and compared to Mojang's acquisition. I would not be surprised at everything if the new MO for the SÃ © Rie is Infinity Ward and Treyarch Developing Modern War and Black Ops in Cycles four-year-old, giving them a release every two years. Timing makes sense. It seems that I am a cold war war every time anything related to cod appears, but I really liked the MP with with and will appear and play some matches from time to time. oof. I mean, he fits with what I would have thought ms would go out and say in 2023, since the business goes away ... As many have already said, there was no room for maneuver in his statement £ o. The fact that there is a buffer in MS by ensuring a specific price for action, regardless of its market price â € œJustâ €, makes it much easier for the Council to make the decision to say â € œOkay, let's postpone a game from which we relyed earlier to help recover the price of our actions (and therefore the value of our compensation) and justify our executive positions. "Now, Neither is driven mainly by COD, but because as Microsoft's acquisition goes. But with ABK doing the announcement now, for a game that will normally be announced after the agreement has been concluded, it is strange. At the time the game is supposed to leave, AB are under Microsoft or the business is not happening and they receive the payment of $ 3 billion than more than cover any losses of not having The annual franchise. Get your swan made and support it for a whole year after release while team 2 starts working on a new IP. Instead? And if it is not the terminal, then Bloomberg is not the source, is it? MS will not have fear of delaying games that are not ready, so I hope the clusterfuck that has been annual releases have been back. I hope they stay at the Arcadey rhythm by which they are known. Well, you got the idea. People are not looking at the positive repercussions that are happening. The news is one thing, but I can not overcome the fact that a journalist knew a source for the story, just chose not to mention it, and then called the source of â € œBoceta .â € And given the moment, maybe it really is the infinite wing? It was not a direct response to Jason's Toon, so he has nothing to do with him. If Activision has changed in advance business negato Not according to Microsoft, I imagine it would annoy the business and allow Microsoft to walk away without penalty. This is the last thing I will say about this because the story here is about Call of Duty, not journalists copy each other, but there are many subscribers to the Bloomberg Terminal who post things on Twitter before our site editors put it on the net. Second, everything points to Bungie being the only one looking to keep multi-platform instead of Sony according to all reports, I'm sure Sony would have been fine with PlayStation/PC and excluding other platforms. They could have done other things with MWR, but at that time they expected MW2R to be the complete package. I have to believe that Bungie got multi platform didn't just come or be decided at the last minute. At the beginning of this gen, Sony made all kinds of offers like Deathloop and was getting better treatment for games like Call of Duty. They should have supported MW19 for much longer. SUGGES, but the casual ones love it when it's so low. The thing is that they can both be right in this case. But I don't think they did very long. He certainly agreed. The Bethesda deal was also before that. And this news would only have pushed him further. But ... Anyway, wild stuff. The 2023 game getting delayed will affect MS's profits. However, let's say Sony acquired Square Enix next year, they would be 100 % exclusive and not multiply. He got it from the terminal? Raven continues to do br. Finally, Microsoft committed to continuing to make cod and other popular Blizzard Activation franchises available on PlayStation because of the size of this deal and a more aggressive FTC to not throw Sony a bone. Seriously. But probably not so soon – and probably not with so little negative impact on the company, its share price and the business executives. But you've never done a minecraft 2. Let's see what they can do with it. The bungie. bungie. It doesn't really tell us anything. I hope that they will stay at the arcadey pace for which they are known. That shit was horrible. Because I love the franchise. Treyarch has to be burned out to this point they have been going hard for so long and helping everyone stay on the track. I mean, unless there are problems with the acquisition it would probably have been MSFT's decision anyway. I'm sorry, but the deal ³'t align with the way Sony did ³ in the past and, to be honest, they paid a lot for them. I mean, ³ source said it was a decision that was being made before the purchase of Microsoft, I honestly don't see Microsoft taking the COD out of the playstation, at least not until they really believe that Gamepass outperformed the profit by letting them out. Not the current shareholders of ABK. But certainly also ©m will have reason µ throw it into your ecosystem. Honestly good. I have not really to just reiterate what a source tells you without doing your due diligence and it is at least quite insulting to reject information with µ intuition. Ghosts and MW19 are not big, and Infinity War is the worst call of duty game ever made. Modern Warfare 2019 has been reduced on its knees because of the silly annual rising schedule. I'm just happy MWII I wasn't the only one getting the treatment for 2 years, I was worried that I would wait for 2023 for that and only fall MWII after a year as usual. There may be more than one F2P (Warzone and Zombies?) CoD at the time the ³ is closed and there is the possibility that MS will split the MP and SP parts as they did with Halo. Sony has already programmed a unique DLC for COD Labels (wasn't there some zombie stuff locked for a year?). If you say so, because what you are not saying here is not so. Two years of MW2 can be very exciting if we have a definite experience in the war Until the end of your life cycle, with a good MP and a robust selection of new and old maps. They were at $ 65 / share right right the announcement. Treyarc is my fav developer of the group, so I'm glad they have extra time. Last issue: February 23, 2022 I really hope this is the first change in activation by decoupling at least one of these major cod studios from the hamster wheel. I wonder if it would have happened that they didn't have the security of almost $70 billion going into their pockets sometime last edited: February 23, 2022 more likely that Microsoft shared their vision of what they wanted to do with Activision during the negotiations and this is in line with that. This is the last thing I will say about this because the story here is about Call of Duty, not journalists copying each other, but there are many subscribers to Bloomberg Terminal who post things on Twitter before our editors on the site put it on the net. But it seems reasonable to think that the decision was made quicker and easier thanks to the acquisition. There is no way to trust them with a cod that could potentially have a 2 year support cycle.
